A paradise all year round

Perched on Sri Lanka's southwest coast, Galle wears its history on its sleeve.

Unspoilt beaches and nodding palms surround the historic town and 16th-century Portuguese-built fort while the rest of the city is lined with Dutch-style houses, high-end restaurants and hotels, quirky shops, whitewashed mansions and heritage museums.

Unawatuna, situated just south of Galle, is a lively Sri Lankan beach town renowned for its sandy beaches, calm waters perfect for swimming and verdant palm tree backdrop.

All-year holidays on one of Sri Lanka's most beautiful beaches

When you step outside the private surroundings of All-Suite Resort Talpe Heights, the majesty of Dalawella Beach awaits you with two separate sections of beach to choose from.

One has a protective reef creating a lagoon which ensures safe swimming all year round for all ages (with turtles to admire) and there is even a small surf break.

The other section is quieter and perfect for relaxing by the golden sands and enjoying the vibrant coastal charm.

Feeling active?

Scuba diving in Unawatuna, snorkelling guides, cooking classes, cycling tours, turtle hatcheries and spa days are all part of the experience.

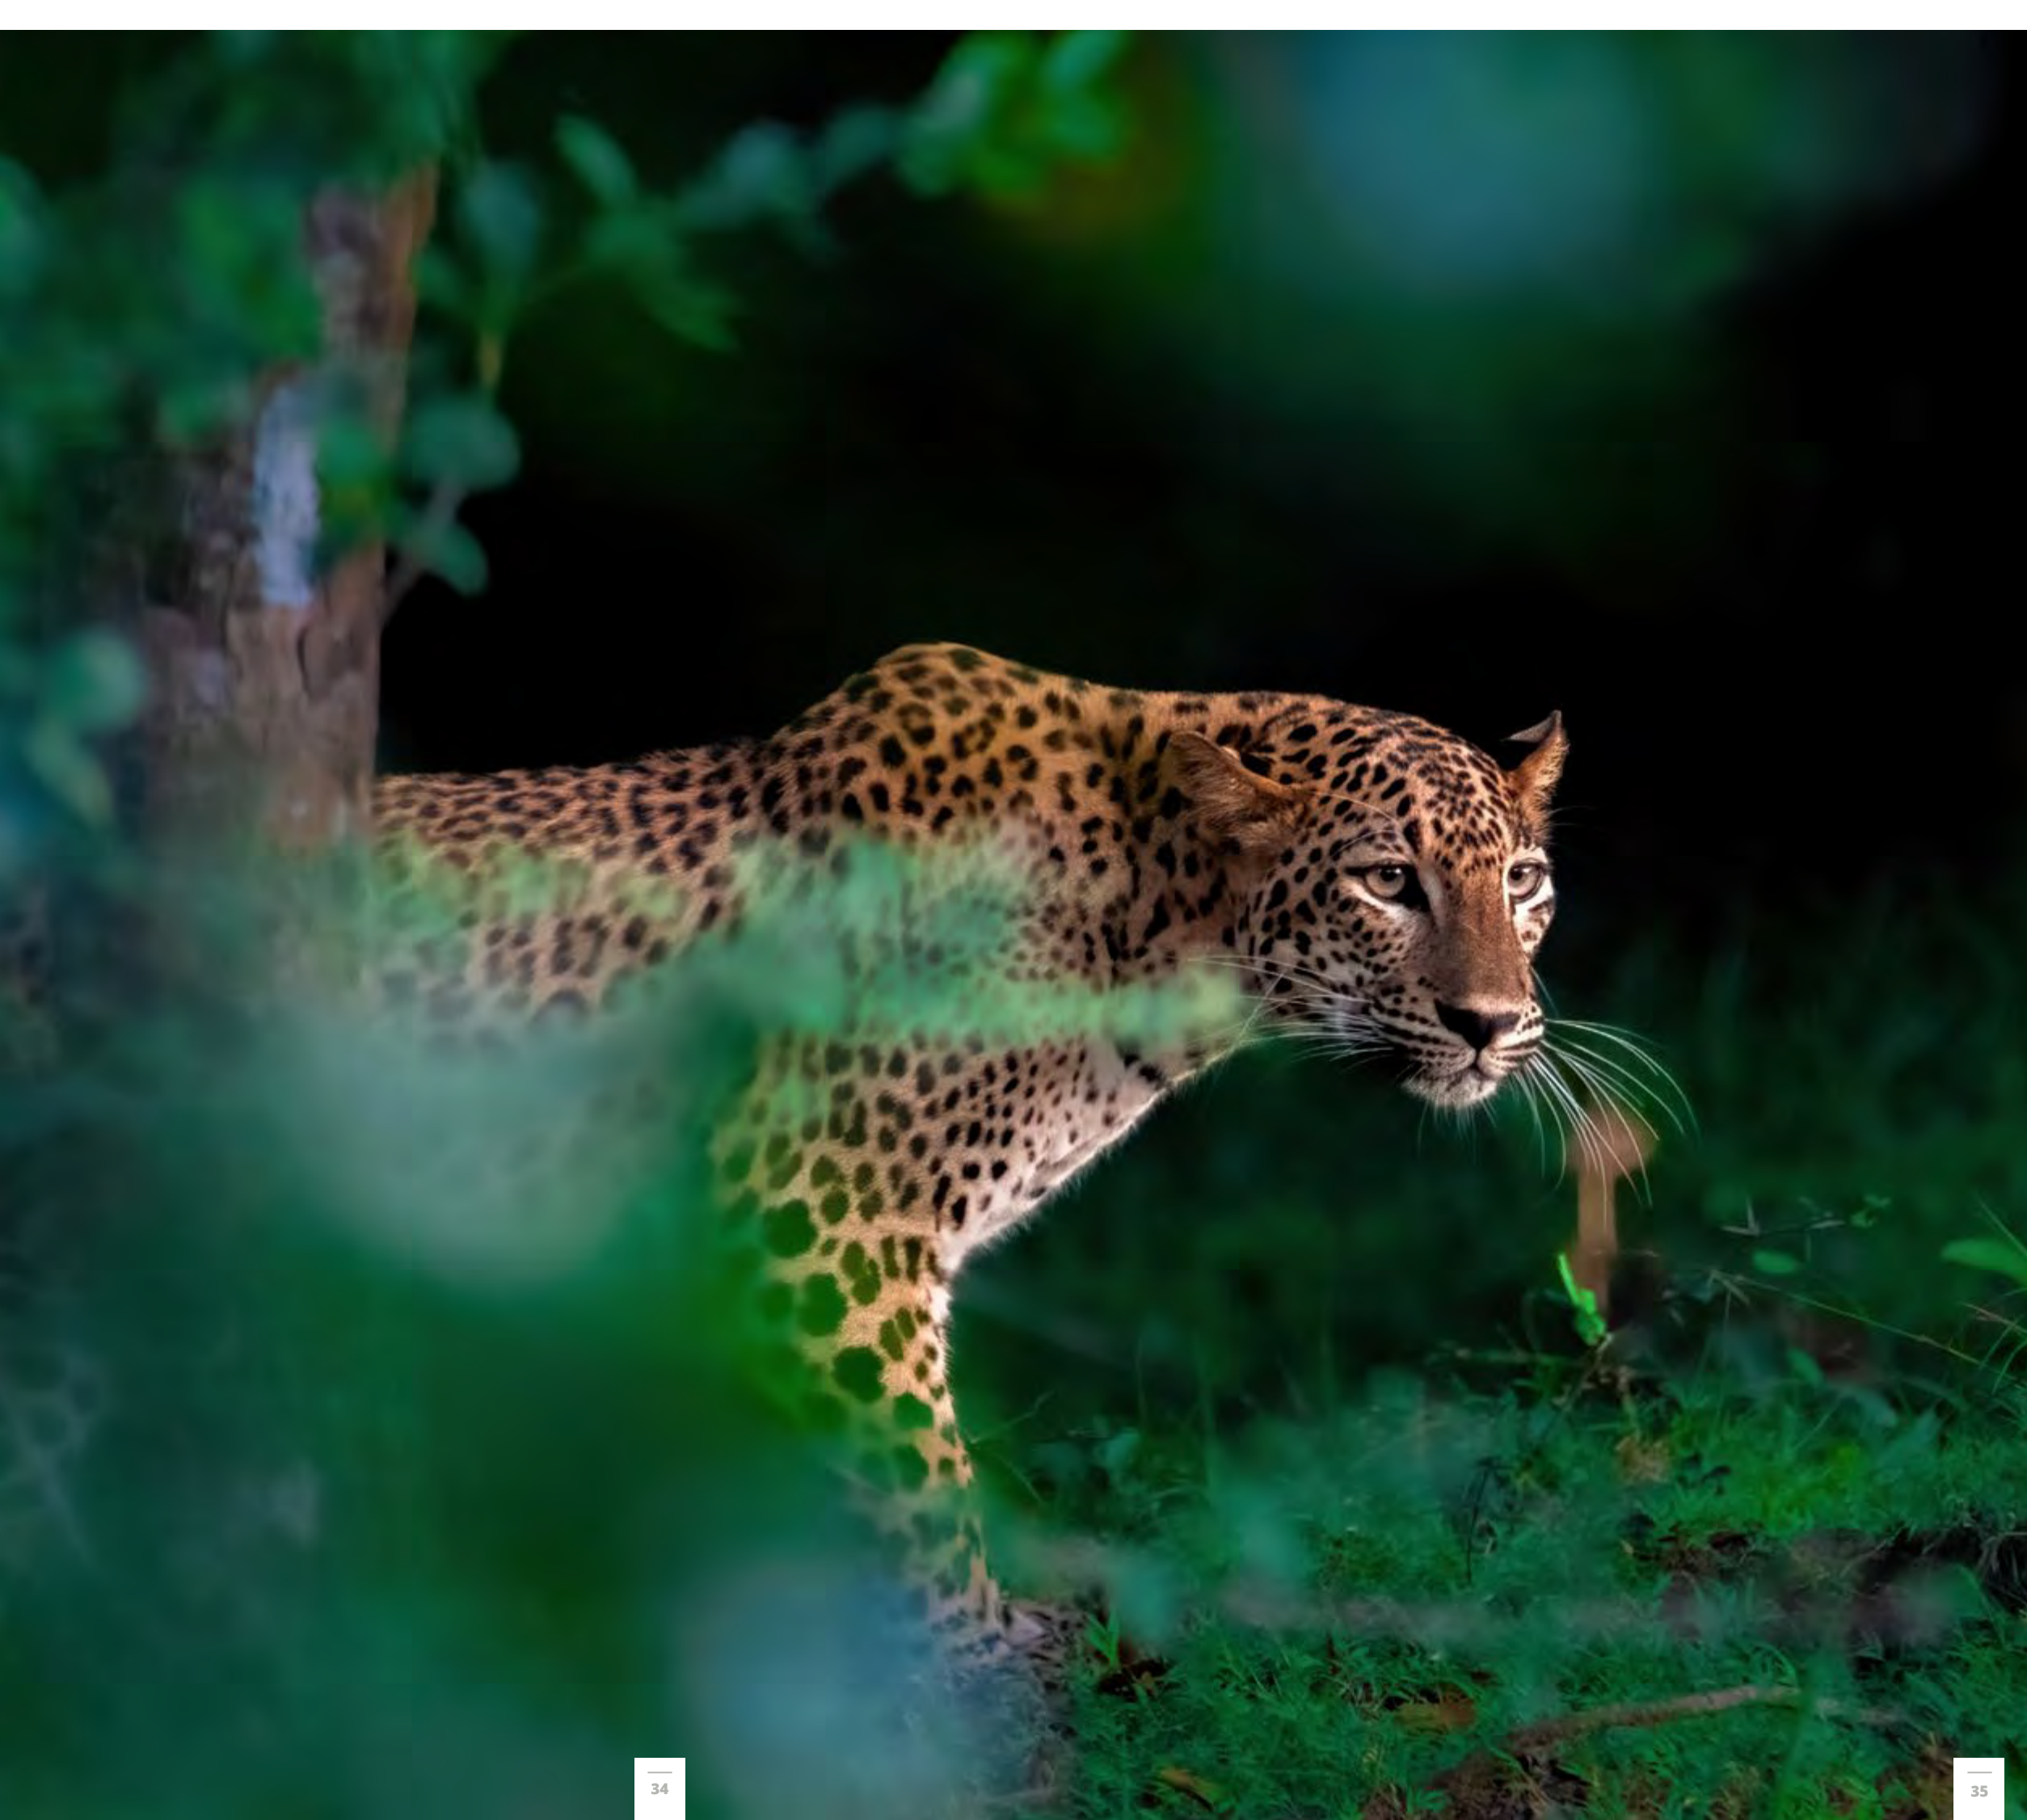

Essential Galle

Investments in Sri Lanka's largest city, Colombo, are predominantly local. In contrast, Galle's historic old town, supported by its established infrastructure, has attracted substantial foreign capital, particularly from European and American expatriates living in Asia who purchase holiday properties.

Experience a tapestry of cultures within the ancient walls of UNESCO-listed Galle Fort in south Sri Lanka. Once trodden by soldiers and sailors, its historic streets now house Dutch Reformed and Anglican churches, antique shops, photogenic cafés and vendors selling freshly baked bread.

Foodies can indulge at the plethora of restaurants in the converted Old Dutch Hospital, as delicious as they are Instagrammable. Beyond the ramparts, fishing boats rest on sandy coves while roadside stalls brim with the freshest fish.

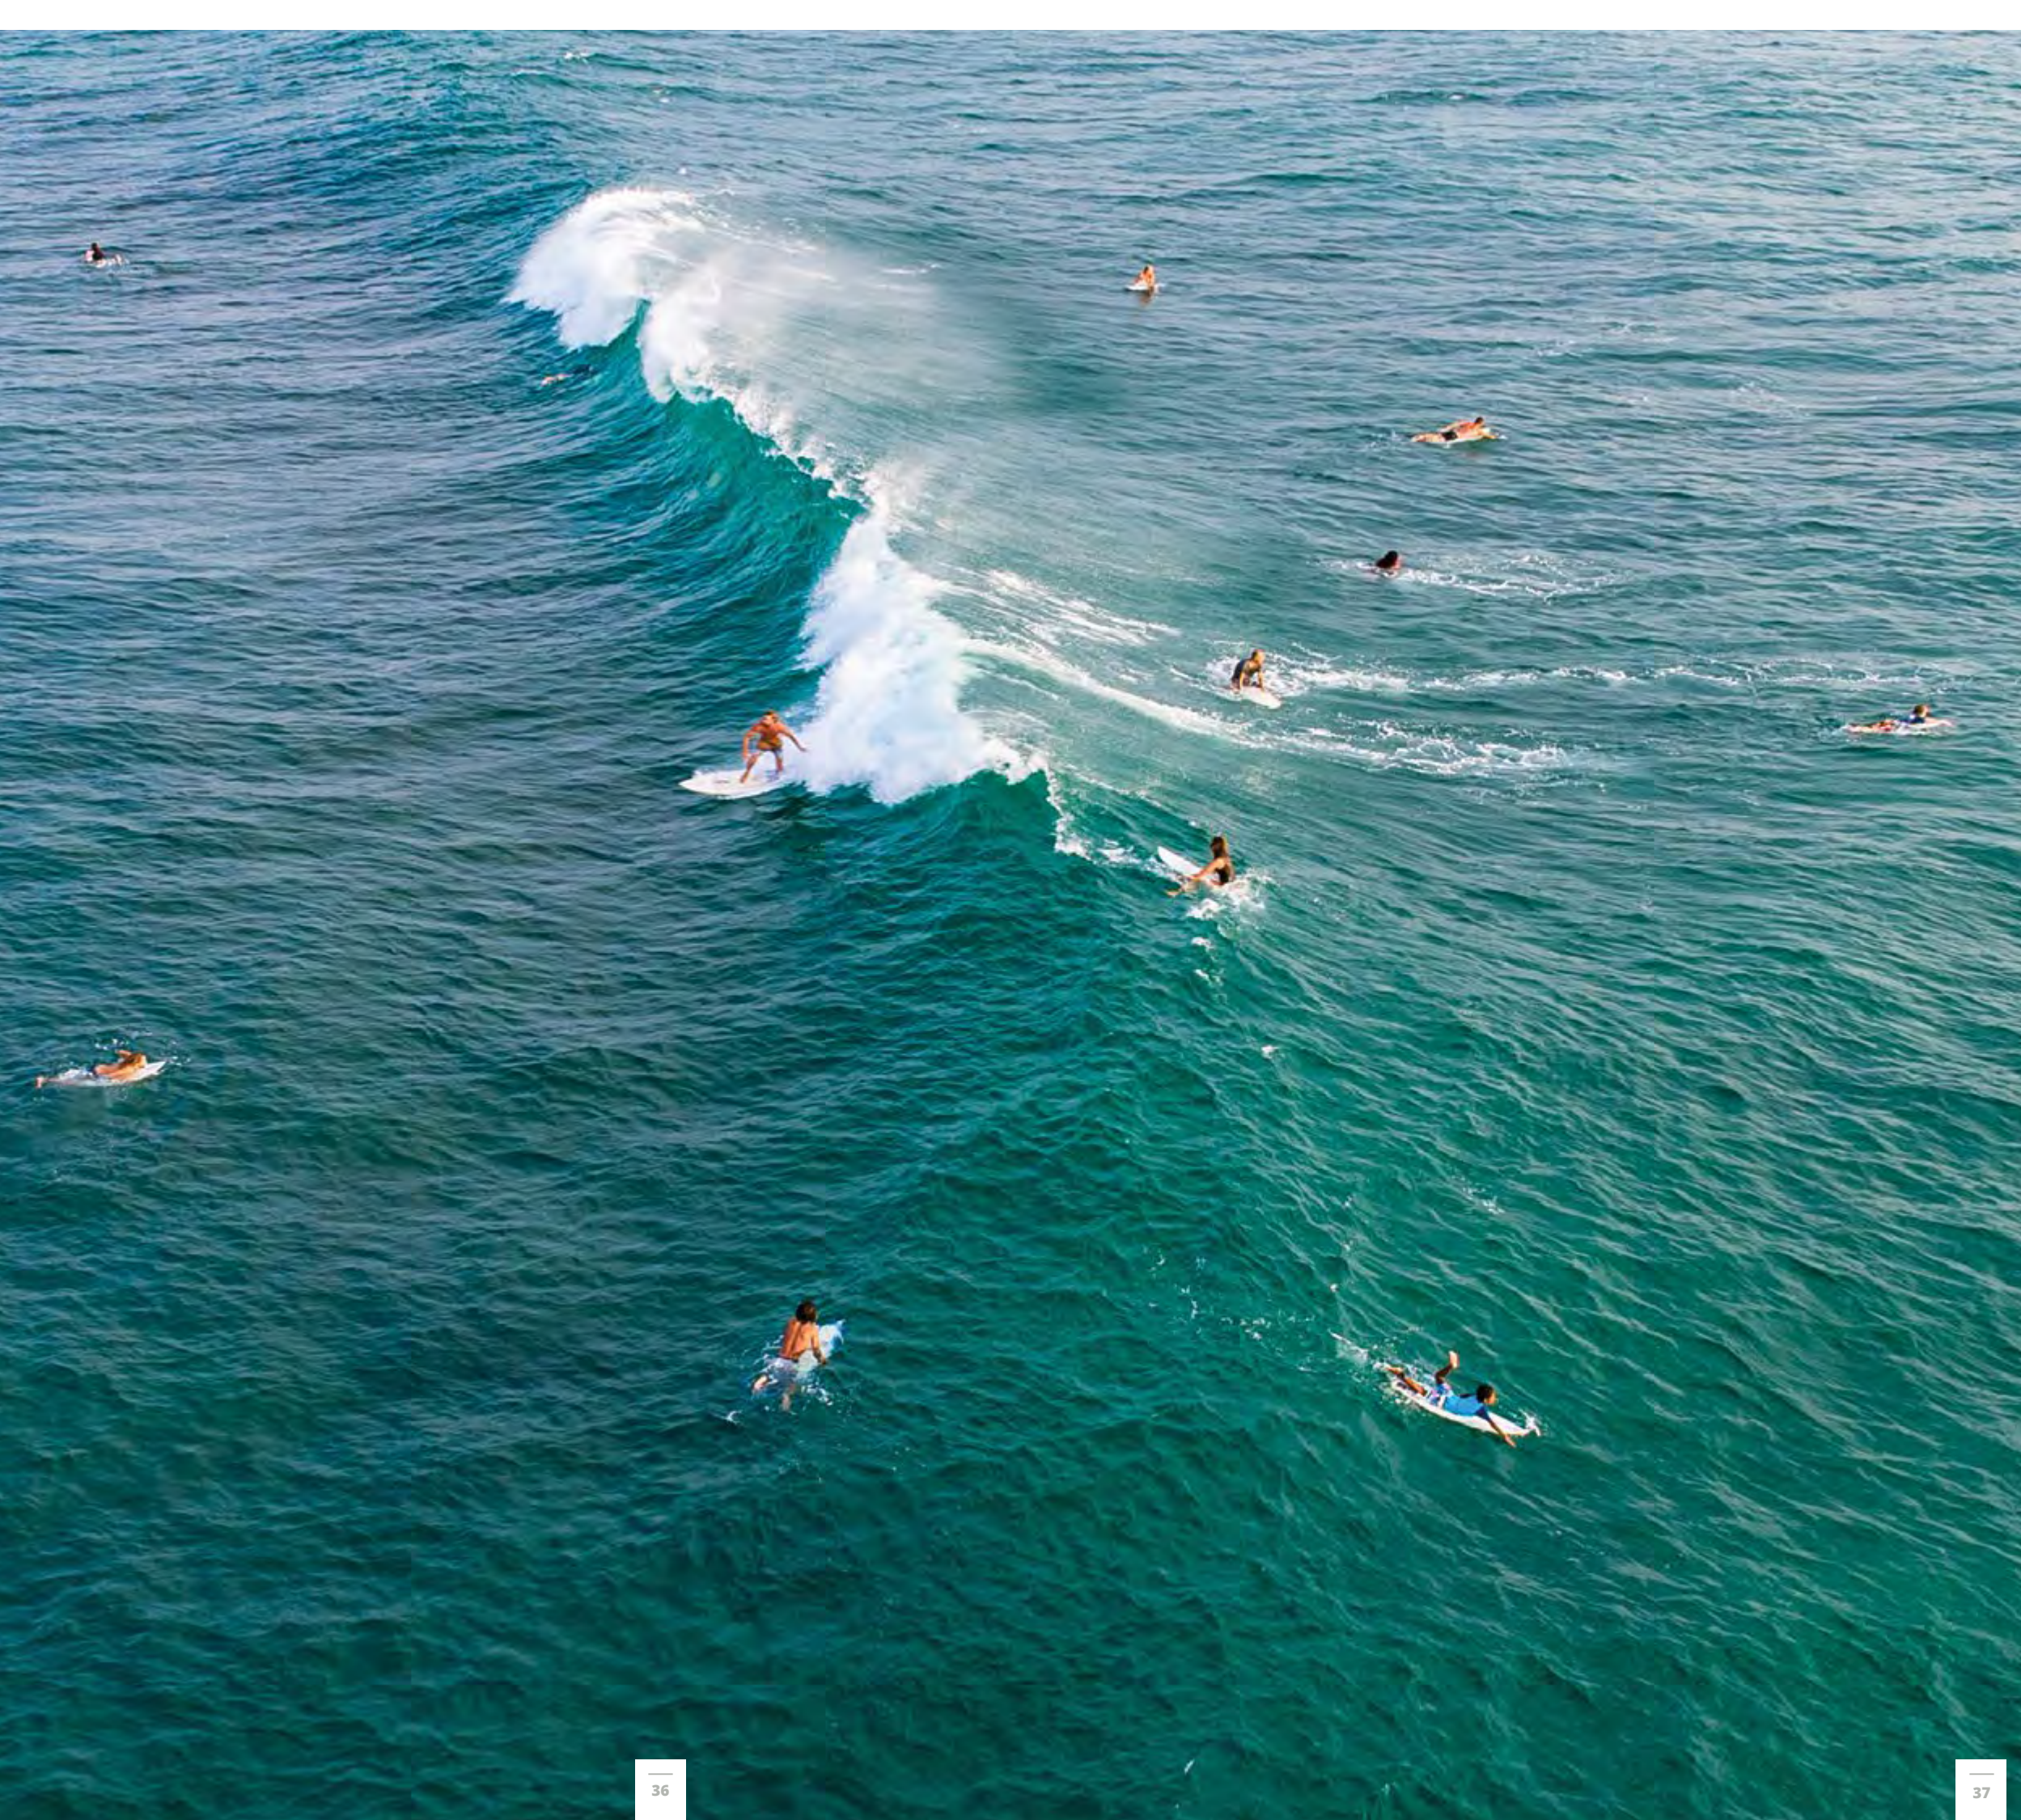

Top 5 hotspot for biodiversity

You'll watch blue whales congregate off the Southern coast of Sri Lanka, observe elephant herds gather in Udawalawe and search for leopards in Yala.

And can you actually say you've been to Sri Lanka without seeing monkeys?

Compact yet diverse, Sri Lanka is one of the world's greatest wildlife destinations.

A warm-water heaven

Wave heights usually range from chest-high to over 5 feet, and the ride length is between 50 and 150 metres. The break is a reef break, and the water is fairly deep at high tide which can help surfers get comfortable with reef surfing.

In contrast, nearby Dewata offers a sandy bottom and other surf spots in the vicinity include:

Koggala - a more remote beach that has a beach break and a mellow left point. 10 minutes from Dalawella.

Kabalana Beach - one of the best all-level surf spots in the South; home to probably the best A-frame in the country. Plus a beach break that's very popular with surf schools and learners. 15 mins from Dalawella by tuk tuk.

Ahangama – popular with intermediates and with learners. 20 mins from Dalawella by tuk tuk.

Galle: one of the most picturesque cricket grounds in the world

With the Indian Ocean visible on two sides of the ground and the famous clocktower of the 16th-century Dutch fort towering above, Galle's international stadium is one of the most scenic venues in the world.
